Sir Samuel Garth,

Knight, M, D.

And FELLOW of the COLLEGE of PHYSICIANS in LONDON.

SIR,

Man must needs
be mortified who presumes to address a Dedication to you after having read yours to Mr. Henley. But I cannot forbear (however unhappily I perform it) expressing the passionate Esteem I have for You, tho' at the same time it puts me upon wishing I cou'd forget the the only thing in its kind which is worthy to be remembred.

If the Papers I am now laying before You, were my own Production, I should then approach You in the Style of a Petitioner, but I think I have a right to Claim the Protection of the first Physician in England, when I am presenting him with the Practice of the greatest Physician in Holland. It would be absurd to offer this Book to any one who is not of the Faculty, which Consideration leaves me no room to make a second Choice; for who can be so ready to protect as he who is divested of private Views, or who so able to judge, as he who so eminently excels in Practice? I am still the more encouraged in this Breedom, by the generous Indignation You have always expressed for the Disregard which has been shewn to the Countrymen of my Author.

It would be impossible to forbear attempting a Panegy-rick upon one of the most valuable Characters in the World, did I not fear I should not be able to come up to the Idea my Readers have of You, and consequently offend all the Town, and amongst them him to whom I should most desire to be agreeable.

But

But there cannot be a Trespass in Esteem and Respect, and I assure You I show a great Instance of it, when I do my felf the violence of not faying to You, what every Body fays of You, and only wishing you may long live the Example and Delight of all the Men of Honour in your Profession, who prefer the Good of Mankind to all meaner Considerations, take this publick Manner of declaring my self,

SIR,

Your most obedient humble Servant R.T.

PREFACE.

Here is not any one System of Physick which affords such certain and compendious Maxims of Practice as the Aphorisms of Professor Boerhaave. The reputation they have gain'd in the World is so uncontested, that it would be impertinent at this time for me to dwell upon it. The Symptoms of Diseases are so accurately deduced from their proximate Causes, that no Person who is acquainted with the preliminary Institutes can be at a loss for clear and obvious Indications.

But

But notwithstanding the Advantages which result from the Assistance of those excellent Directions contained in that Book, the young Practitioner is very often to seek for a Materia Medica which will answer the Intentions pointed out to him by these Aphorisms.

It is from this Motive that I am prevail'd upon to make publick the following Formulæ, which were copied from the learned Author's Original, and comprehend all the Methodus Præscribendi which he makes use of in his Praetice. The Order in which they are ranged is the same with that of the Book itself, and each Prescription relates immediately to the Section which bears the respective Number.

He who compiled the Work must certainly be allowed to have the just est Authority to affix such Remedies to it as he judges the best adapted to his Design, and by

by this means the Inabilities of unexperienced Practitioners are supply'd, and their Mistakes obviated. The late Translation of the Aphorisms renders a Publication of this kind the more useful; for I am persuaded that no one, who is desirous of reading Boerhaave's Aphorisms in English, will be out of humour to find a Book which consisted of general Indications reduced to a particular practical Method by the Addition of Prescriptions.

It may be objected that the World is already overstocked mith Pharmacopoeias and Receipt-Books, and that by adding to the Number, the Beginners in Physick will be still the more perplexed in their Choice. This I grant would seem a sufficient Argument against any loose undigested Collection; but the Case here is of a quite different nature, there being no one frescription in these Sheets which is not form'd with an intire View to its corresponding Section, so that the Objection will hold equally valid against any Book of Practice which shall appear with Medicines annexed to it.

The consummate Skill, which this incomparable Author is known to have in the Materia Medica mou'd not suffer me to suppress these Papers any longer for my own private Use, for I think it the Duty of every publick Spirit, to make the Performances of Men of his Abilities as diffusive as they are valuable.
